I believe that learning styles certainly do affect how we learn! I have experienced multiple types of learning styles, and I am able to say for certain that their effectiveness can vary per person. I was able to learn Math a lot more effectively with a more “hands on” approach, as opposed to a previous course, which employed a “teach it yourself” kind of method which I struggled with a lot. It all comes down to the type of person and the subject of education, as well as the teacher.
